

Little, Yet Wise

Proverbs 30:24-28

Out of the instincts and experiences of the past, ants use the present to prepare for the future.

The ant gathers food in summer,
because he knows winter is coming.

The coney knows where his security lies: he's safe within the rock.

A large flock of locusts is shown in flight against a clear blue sky. The locusts are densely packed, filling most of the frame. Below them, a field of dry, golden-brown grass is visible. The overall scene conveys a sense of a massive, coordinated movement.

The locusts teach us the power of Christian community.

The spider reminds us that God does things that don't always make sense to us.

- 1. Use each season of life to prepare for winter.
- 2. Remember where your security lies.
- 3. Embrace those around you as you labor together for Christ.
- 4. Trust that God's way is best, even if it doesn't make sense.
